Hello, everyone! I'm Eric. Today, I will introduce a plant, its name is Don't Touch Me. You must be interested in this name, right? Don’ t worry, I will let you know how it get so strange name. Here is the story about Don't Touch Me.

Someday in autumn, I found it when Dad, Mum and I went hiking. It has green leaves like baby's fingers, the flowers are white and purple, they smell sweet, their seeds are very small.

I took some seeds home. In spring, I planted them in the garden. I took care of them carefully. When it began to flower, butterflies were flying everywhere in the garden. I was excited to see their fruit. When I touched the fruit, their seeds were flying out everywhere, they were saying, "Don't touch me! Don't touch me!"it's so fun!

Now, you know its name is Don't touch me. It has another name balsamine. But I like calling them Don't touch me, it's easy to remember.

Do you like it? You could have a try to plant it in a flowerpot, it's an interesting thing to watch them grow up every day.

In My Wildest Imagination

Children’ s imagination is based on the curious eyes of them from their unique perspective. It is also an expression of innocence without external influence.

If I were a drop of water, I would like to drop in the flow of time, although I will be with the passage of time and leave together, but I know that I have applied the colorful world of light shining off together.

If I were a drop of water, I would like to reflect the sun’ s light that reflects bright flowers such as seven-color rainbow as brilliant.

With knowledge as the soil and pure curiosity and modest doubt as the seed, imagination can usher in a grand bloom.

I have a pet. He's a cat. His name is Harry, nine months old. He has orange skin. Harry's eyes are green, which look like gemstones.

He is so naughty. When I do school assignments, he often jumps onto the desk and then sits on my book that makes me have difficult in concentrating. He also scratches the refrigerator magnet, chases after it as a ball. At last, the magnet disappears.

But in a different way, Harry is cute. His sleeping post is funny. His head is in the face of the ceiling, and his body faces to the ground. The whole cat is really like a Mobile belt.

How lovely Harry is! I like him!

Last weekend, my family planned to pick strawberries. When father told me the exciting news, I started to imagine the fresh strawberries with sweet smells. My little brother laughed happily and even danced with joy.

Along the way, my family and I enjoyed beautiful scenery outside the car window. When we left the car in the parking areas, however, the sky was full of dark clouds. Suddenly, the rain was pouring down and the lane became muddy. We were told that the sheds were closed because of the heavy rain. My little brother was so sad. He looked ready to cry. I put my arm around his shoulder and slapped him lightly. I said, “I know you’ re upset, but we still have the chance to pick strawberries. And look! I have never seen so many strawberries before. All of them are hanging in the vine, just like red cute lanterns. Listen! There are so many birds here. They are singing and dancing freely. Smell! I can catch the scent of fresh strawberries mixed the smell of grass. It’ s rare in the cities, isn’ t it?” My parents came up to us and said, “That’ s correct! The heavy rain totally upset our arrangement, but our family is together, enjoying the peace out here in the country and enjoying this special twist together.”

Dancing Teeth

I have crooked teeth. I remember my teeth have changed since the first grade of primary school. Because I don't like brushing my teeth, some of my teeth are decayed. One of my canine teeth has been shaking since last summer vacation. But I don't care about it. How interesting it is that this tooth is dancing in my mouth! It's dancing more and more happily recently! The movement range of the dance is also increasing. I always tend to touch it gently with my tongue to stop it from dancing. But its disobedience made me have the impulse to pull it out. I finally pulled it out this Sunday night. I feel much more comfortable!

I must brush my teeth and never let them dance again!
